Our Views:

- The tepid growth recorded in the eight core index in December 2023 was on account of a higher base in December last year.
- The cement industry posted growth of 1.3% in December 2023 as opposed to a contraction 4.0% witnessed in the previous month.
- Moderation in core sector growth in December 2023 implies that industrial growth, as measured by the Index of Industrial Production (IIP), may also cool down as the eight core industries constitute approximately 40 percent of the weight of the IIP.
- Going forward, the high base effect is expected to keep core sector expansion muted while it is likely to gather momentum from March 2024 onwards.
